

Why use this resource?

There are different approaches to this problem that can potentially reveal different levels of mathematical thinking. Forming and solving an inequality is perhaps the more approach, however an approach based on comparing the features of each fraction and considering whether the general function is increasing or decreasing can be very informative. This problem could give students the opportunity to realize the power of these higher-order thinking skills.